Re Item V

Reasoned statement with regard to novelty, inventive step or industrial applicability;
citations and explanations supporting such statement

1. Reference is made to the following documents:

- D1: WO 03/094920 A (DE BETHUNE MARIE-PIERRE T M M ; STOFFELS PAUL (BE); VAN ROEY JENS MARC) 20 November 2003
- D2: WO 01/28515 A (GIZURARSON SVEINBJORN ; SKULASON SKULI (IS); HOLBROOK W PETER (IS); KR) 26 April 2001

- D4: CARLAN S J ET AL., OBSTETRICS AND GYNECOLOGY, vol. 90, no. 6, December 1997 (1997-12), pages 911-915
- D5: SYED TANWEER A ET AL., INTERNATIONAL JOURNAL OF STD AND AIDS, vol. 11, no. 6, June 2000 (2000-06), pages 371-374
- D6: BIRNIE CHRISTINE R ET AL., JOURNAL OF PHARMACEUTICAL SCIENCES, vol. 90, no. 9, September 2001 (2001-09), pages 1386-1394
- D7: BALLAGH S A ET AL., CONTRACEPTION, vol. 66, no. 5, November 2002 (2002-11), pages 369-375
- D8: US 2003/0039704 A (ARKIN ET AL) 27 February 2003 (2003-02-27)
- D9: US 5,849,761 B (YAKSH) 15 December 1998 (1998-12-15)

The documents D8 and D9 were not cited in the international search report. Copies of the documents are appended hereto.

2. The subject-matter of claims 1-4 is considered novel because it is not directly and unambiguously disclosed in the cited state of the art (Article 33(2) PCT).
3. The subject-matter of claims 1-4 does not involve an inventive step (Art. 33(3) PCT) because having regard to the cited prior art it is obvious to a person skilled in the art (Article 33(3) PCT).

- 3.1 Hydrogels based on hydroxyethylcellulose as the only gelling and bioadhesive agent are disclosed e.g. in D4, D5 and D7. The gels disclosed therein are used for delivery of an active agent through vaginal mucosae. For example, D5 discloses effective delivery of 5-fluorouracil. Although said documents do not explicitly study the bioadhesive capacity of the disclosed hydrogels, a certain level of bioadhesion is implicitly present, only due to the fact that the disclosed hydrogels are based on hydroxyethylcellulose. It should be noted that hydroxyethylcellulose is generally known to produce bioadhesive hydrogels. Reference is made to e.g. D3, which studies the bioadhesive properties of aqueous hydroxyethylcellulose gels.
- 3.2 The hydroxyethylcellulose based hydrogels disclosed in the above mentioned documents differ from the presently claimed hydrogel only by the presence in the latter of further additives such as glycerol, diethylene glycol monoethyl ether, surfactants, preservatives and acidifiers. However, the addition of such additives, although not explicitly disclosed in D3, D4, D5 and D7, falls within standard formulation practice which is considered obvious to a skilled person. More particularly, the claimed additives are very common ingredients in the formulation of topical compositions for delivery of active agents to the skin or mucosal tissues. For example, glycerol and diethylene glycol monoethyl ether are common penetration enhancers. Hydroxyethylcellulose based hydrogels comprising one or more of such additives are known e.g. from D8 (cf. examples 1-4) and D9 (examples 5-6).
4. The subject-matter of claims 1-4 is considered to be industrially applicable and accordingly meets the requirements of Art.33(4) PCT.

Re Item VI

Certain documents cited

Document D1, published after the effective date of filing of the present application, contains subject-matter (cf. passages cited in the ISR) which may be relevant to the present application (Rule 70.10 PCT).

Re Item VIII

Certain observations on the international application

The examples of the invention described on pages 3 and 4 do not fall within the scope of the independent claim. This inconsistency between the claims and the description leads to doubt concerning the matter for which protection is sought, thereby rendering the claims unclear, Article 6 PCT.
